

Honor Distinguished Covingtonian

The group of distinguished Kentuckians named by Governor Sampson as members of the George Washington Bi-Centennial Commission for Kentucky, at their first session held in Louisville, selected for their chairman, the Rev. James D. Gibson, rector of the Trinity Episcopal Church in Covington.

This honor comes to a clergyman who is one of the outstanding leaders in the Lexington diocese of this church and one whose display of interest in all worth-while and progressive movements, has won for the Rev. Gibson the deserved respect throughout the State.

It is proposed to make of the Washington Bi-Centennial a great national event, and Kentucky, through the commission named by the governor, proposes to do its part in this celebration.

It is a foregone conclusion that the Rev. Gibson will give to the labors of the commission the best that is in him and it is gratifying to note that his fellow Kentuckians composing this body have honored him with the chairmanship of the commission.
